His brothers hate Joseph on this account, and also because of his dreams which he repeats, for they see in these dreams his superiority. Jacob sends his older sons to pasture his flocks at Shechem, and later sends Joseph to see how they are prospering. Joseph learns that they have gone on to Dothan and follows them. They see this dreamer, as they call him, approaching, and conspire to kill him, and then see what will become of his dreams. Reuben counsels them not to kill him but to cast him into a deep pit. This they do, and while they are feasting they see a company of Ishmaelites approaching and decide, on Judah s advice, to sell him as a slave. But meanwhile, Midianite merchantmen have discovered the lad, and releasing him from his prison they sell him to the Ishmaelites for...
