It has naturally fallen too at that season of the year, when the gathered harvests offer their unmistakable proofs of the reward that has attended the labor of men, in the chief and most essential calling of life, that of Husbandry. Even less than Puritan or Pilgrim piety might be moved, as Autumn wheels her loaded products into the storehouses provided for them, to lift up the heart with special thanks to Him who giveth seed-time and harvest, and who measures out the rain, the sunshine and the dew. And never, perhaps, had we more urgent reasons for observing a day of public and general thanksgiving than now. Let me lead your thoughts to the consideration of...
