Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . What is worth printing, is worth printing twice, seems to be the judgment of many of our writers today, and especially of those who write along the lines of New Testament Criticism. Almost all the chapters of this book have appeared elsewhere as magazine articles. Several of them have no relation in any way each to the other, except that they have to do with some phase of New Testament Criticism. They are all of real value nevertheless, and few readers are likely to have found all of them heretofore in the various periodicals in which they first appeared. The Other Studies of the title include the following essays: Galatians, the earliest of the Pauline Epistles, a strong argument in favor of the early date of the letter to the Galatians, a theory which is growing in favor and which found one of its strongest and most enthusiastic supporters in Douglas Round and his little book on the subject, published some five years ago. The Problem of the Apocalypses, and its bearing on the conception of inspirations, is another of the essays. Should the Magnificat be ascribed to Elizabeth? is a third. In a fourth he reviews carefully what Professor Harnack has to say in his Sprache und Reden Jesu, about the Second Source of the First and Third Gospels. That source is known as Q, from the German Quelle, and names that common source of both Matthew and Luke which, it is generally agreed, must in some form and in some sense, lie behind the matter that is common to these Gospels alone. The author, Mr. Emmett, is a very careful reader and a very fair...
